

5/10/16

Monday, May 9, 2016 3:36 PM

Please underline the independent clauses once, the dependent clauses twice, and circle the subordinate beginners. Then label if the sentence is simple, compound, complex, or compound-complex.

1. If you remember correctly, when we last discussed Jack, Jill, and John's story, Jack was dead, and Jill and John had run away together and were going to live happily ever after.
2. Unfortunately for Jill and John, at the bottom of the cliff, Jack's finger began to twitch.
3. Suddenly, Jack's eyes burst open as he looked around his stony surroundings.
4. Jack sat up even though his body was actually a bit mangled, and as he thought about what he had experienced, he could only remember climbing the hill with Jill.